March Meetings Recap

There were three meetings in March. NASA's Mgr of Future Propulsion Systems, Donald Palac, gave an excellent presentation on the evolution of the space program with incredible slides of space, vehicles to take us there, and a whole lot more.

The second meeting was a very informative tour of Rockford's Pacific Scientific, makers of motors and drives.

The following recap was submitted by Mohammed Irfan

The genesis of IEEE student branch at NIU lies not in any coincidence but in an urge to set excellence and perfection in the field of Electrical Engineering. To accomplish this goal the student branch promotes interactive sessions for student members involving activities varying from seminars, conferences, workshops and meetings. The IEEE NIU student branch organized a well attended social networking event for the benefit of the student members and faculty. The IEEE organization aims at networking technocrats thereby providing a forum for members to share knowledge and enhance their careers. By bringing delegates from big companies like Hamilton Sundstrand, Philips, Siemens Technologies, GE Medical Systems and UPS, the student branch was very successful in accomplishing this mission. The event began with a social mingling followed by the dinner. After dinner there were mind boggling impromptu speeches by professionals on current economic scenarios, future prospects and some useful tips for graduating engineers. Indeed, it was an enriching experience to note the career path of successful engineers and learn from them.
