January RRVS Meeting Recap

Tom Overbye, Fox Family Professor of Electrical and Computer Engineering at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (UIUC), provided attending RRVS members and students with a great perspective of current and potential energy sources and their estimated contributions towards meeting the demand for US energy needs now and in the future. Tom also afforded attendees a good perspective of the cyclical nature of global temperature patterns over the past millennia, and the quantities of carbon dioxide that have been and are being put into earth's atmosphere. His presentation is chock full of graphs and illustrations that present the various perspectives. His presentation is available for download at your RRVS website. The following link will take you directly to the web page from which you can download the presentation:
